

NAMDEB EMPLOYEES RECOGNIZE FRONTLINE WORKERS

At Namdeb, we recognize that since the advent of the deadly Corona virus, many of us found it difficult to adjust our lives to the disruption as we grapple with the negative impact of the virus both emotionally and physically. Whilst it is easy to protect ourselves and isolate from the public, we have huge respect and appreciation of the frontline workers whom because of the nature of the work, to save patients' lives and at the forefront of this pandemic is demanding. The challenges and risks they face are noticeably far greater than that of the average person.

Our health workers continue to work tirelessly to keep us safe and healthy whilst risking their lives both physically and emotionally. We thank all of them for continuing to be on the frontline not only for the work that they have been doing towards the fight against the virus but also for juggling between the demands of attending to other patients. As we all navigate major change and uncertainty, these heroes and heroines continue to sacrifice themselves and for that we are very proud.

As a token of appreciation, the Namdeb employees came together to honor the frontline employees with care packs provided to the Katutura, Windhoek Central and the Oranjemund hospitals, to recognize and support our heroes in the hope of boosting their morale and to build positivity.

We see you and recognize you for all that you continue to
